The World's Best Delphiniums

An exceptionally correct June display of Delphiniums, Lilium Candidum, and White Phlox.

THE Delphinium (Hardy Larkspur) always has been and will continue to be one of the most valuable and most highly favored of all hardy old-fashioned flowers.

Its bold, towering, massive spikes of bloom, are unequalled by any other plant of similar stature and shade. It stands alone and unexcelled by its contribution of blue, lavender and other delicate tints both in the garden and for decorative purposes when cut.

It is generous by its frequent appearance in schemes that provide garden gaiety throughout the year, for, if cut back after its first and heaviest blooms appear in June, it will respond with a second and often a third crop (naturally diminishing in vigor, but none the less welcome) in late Autumn.

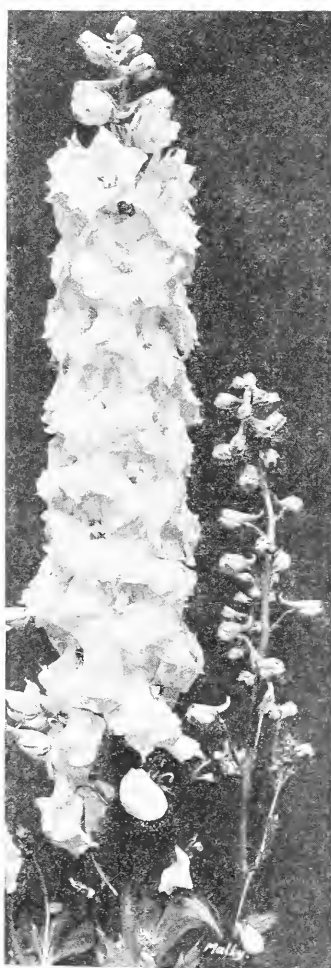

In order to fully enjoy and appreciate the wonderful flower formations and complete range of colors now known, one must secure plants of the very best strain. Old Belladonna and Sinensis fade into oblivion by comparison.

Up to the present time, England has been the leader in production of good Delphiniums and the world's provider of every improved form and color.

Many growers contributed to England's fame, but their seedlings were about on a par, until a few years ago, one from near the little town of "Wrexham" startled "Delphiniumdom" with some seedlings he exhibited at London and other big shows.

The Famous Wrexham Strain

This strain, now known as the "Wrexham Strain," introduced an entirely new family of giant-flowered sorts, in double, semi-double, and single flowered forms, far superior and different to all others, and brought forth many new and delightfully delicate colors, both self and two-toned, never seen before. Everything from indigo blue to the palest lavender.

A typical spike of the "Wrexham" strain.

We consider ourselves particularly fortunate in having been able to secure a fair quantity of the original "Wrexham" seed, which we have had grown for us, and we believe that, last year we were the first in America to offer plants of this remarkable strain of Delphiniums.

We shall have only a limited quantity to distribute this year, but even these will give those who admire this beautiful border plant, an opportunity to secure a wonderful new form of a very old-fashioned flower.

One of the most pleasing features of Delphiniums is their wonderful companionship in the garden with certain other plants. Contrasts of striking beauty and delightful harmony can be arranged by their association with neighborly hues of white, pink or yellow.

Plant Delphiniums and Madonna Lilies Together

Rarely one sees the beautiful Lilium candidum (Madonna lily) planted with Delphiniums, but the contrast is so strikingly beautiful that we feel tempted to suggest the arrangement here, so that those planning a June garden for 1925, may decide now on this splendid combination.

We are making a special offer to those who desire to order now. The Delphiniums can be shipped at once, being in 3 in. pots or field-grown divisions in the fall for those who prefer them. The Lilium Candidum bulbs are new crop, for August and September delivery.
